

BULLETIN November

Indigenous Ministry

Ian James has recently been appointed by Anglicare SA as their Aboriginal Consultant. His role is to broaden the outreach of Anglicare into indigenous groups and for indigenous issues. As this is a state-wide brief this gives real possibilities for ministry with indigenous people in the Diocese of Willochra.

A prime activity for Ian will be meeting with ministry groups and establishing networks, helping others to link appropriately with indigenous groups.

Ian's role and expertise will include assisting ministry groups to extend Anglicare's programs and services into regional and country areas that have a large population of Aboriginal people. To make this happen he will work closely with the Diocese in engaging with the Aboriginal community, building strong relationships and developing appropriate programs that will combat various issues within the communities. His aim is always to build understanding and respect.

To this end Ian needs to make contact with people in the Diocese who either have contact with or minister to indigenous people, or who live with indigenous people and would like to take steps to working with them. If you are in this situation you might like to either contact Anglicare Willochra, or contact Ian himself at
